Amir Temur's leadership talent was clearly demonstrated during his campaigns against Tokhtamish, in India, and against the Turkish sultan Bayazid Yildirim.

Amir Temur was aware of the danger posed by the Golden Horde. From 1360 to 1380, that is, in 20 years, the Golden Horde changed khans 25 times. In 1375, Orish Khan, the ruler of the White Horde, decided to unite two parts of the Jochi ulus - the Golden Horde and the White Horde. Together, the hordes could pose a serious threat to the state of Amir Temur. Amir Temur skillfully used the situation to prevent this danger.

Toi Khoja, one of the Uzbek emirs of the White Horde, was killed by Uriskhan for refusing to participate in the military campaign against the Golden Horde. In 1376, Tokhtamish Oglan, the son of Toi Khoja Khan, escaped from the White Horde and came to Samarkand.

Amir Temur decided to use it to fight Oris Khan. Amir Temur thought that Tokhtamish would be the person who would conduct his policy in Jochi ulus . But it turned out to be the opposite. With the help of Amir Temur, Tokhtamysh, who became the Khan of the White Horde, followed in the footsteps of Orishkhan, that is, he began the struggle to unite the Zochi clan and create the mighty Golden Horde. Tokhtamysh (1377), who became the ruler of the White Horde, his rival and false khan He decided to take advantage of Mamaykhan's defeat at the Kulikovo field against the Russian prince Dmitry Donskoy and destroyed the rest of Mamaykhan's army on the banks of the Kalka river. After this victory, Tokhtamysh became the supreme ruler of the Golden Horde and began to unite both parts of the Jochi ulus.

The disagreements between Amir Temur and the ambitious and scheming Tokhtamysh took the form of an open fight.

Tokhtamysh tried to restore the power of the Golden Horde during the reign of Uzbek Khan (1312-1320). He started military campaigns to conquer new lands. In 1386, Tokhtamysh's army invaded Azerbaijan. He conquered Tabriz, many cities of Azerbaijan were looted and destroyed.
